BANDITS GET $894 AT LOCAL STORE

VISITOR FROM THE NORTH: This Snowy owl dropped into Benton Harbor the other day, not quite certain whether to continue flying south or enjoy the balmy climate here. He was observed high in a tree at the Fidelity Insurance Co., 769 Pipestone street. The owl reportedly migrate when faced with famine in their native Arctic. However, some seem to get confused and head south regardless of the food situation. (Staff photo)

Don Marlin Heads Cass Democrats

Expect Wrestler
To Bring Action

CASSOPOLIS — Former professional wrestler Don Marlin, supervisor of Howard township near Niles, was elected Cass county chairman last night by the executive committee of the Cass county Democratic party.

The vote was 12 to 5 for Marlin over Atty. Burk Webb of Marcellus. The executive committee met at the Cass county courthouse in Cassopolis.

Marlin is well known as "Farmer Don," the name he wrestled under for the past 25 years. He was famous for his "mule kick," delivered against such villains as Gorgeous George, Hans Schmidt, and Benito Gardini.

"Farmer Don" wrestled wearing tattered bib overalls. When he started in the sport in 1941 his family owned a 283 acre corn and cattle farm near Niles.

For many years Marlin operated a restaurant and he is now owner and operator of a trailer park and a motel 5 1/2 miles east of Niles on M-60.

REPLACES TOTH

Marlin replaces Steve Toth who resigned last week as county Democrat chairman and as supervisor of Ontwa township. When he resigned, Toth said the results of the general election early this month show that new people with new ideas should take over the Democratic party in Cass county.

Mrs. Ilona Schyrer of Dowagiac was elected vice-chairman; Mrs. Bernice Fox of Cassopolis was re-elected secretary; and Mrs. Bertha Crockett of Vandalla was re-elected treasurer.

EXPLAINS FEUD Reuther Says Meany, Labor Failing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers Union, says the American labor movement under the leadership of George Meany is failing in its responsibility to the American people.

Long at odds with Meany, national president of the AFL-CIO, on Viet Nam, Reuther said Tuesday that and other issues are "only a small part" of the reason for his feud with Meany.

He said labor's failure to promote a strong civil rights campaign, a strong stand on education, increased Social Security benefits and a greater effort to erase poverty is "fundamentally what's wrong with the American labor movement."

Reuther spoke before some 400 students of the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Finance and Commerce.

Mr. Lake was president of Star Pattern & Manufacturing Co. for many years. He retired in 1959 and his son, Warren, has since headed the West Main street firm.

He was graduated from Michigan State in 1904 and spent more than half a century in mechanical engineering. Mr. Lake was chief draftsman at Saranac Machine Co., Benton Harbor, until World War I when he resigned to enter government work. He was granted several patents for designing various machines.

NATIVE SON

Born Jan. 4, 1881, in Pipestone township, Mr. Lake married the former Miss Jessie Tibbs in 1906 in Eau Claire. Mrs. Lake died in 1963.

Mr. Lake had resided at 1348 Colfax avenue in Fairplain.

Tentative Contract Agreement

Previous Wage
Pact Rejected
By Workers

DETROIT (AP) — Company and union bargainers today reached tentative agreement on a contract between the Michigan Bell Telephone Co. and some 17,000 members of the Communications Workers of America.

The agreement was reached after both sides continued to negotiate past a midnight Tuesday deadline imposed by the union.

A Michigan Bell spokesman said the wage increases agreed on will be retroactive to Oct. 2 if the contract is ratified prior to Dec. 13.

The spokesman said today's pact retained all the features of a contract reached Oct. 4 but rejected by union members Oct. 31.

FEW WILDCAT STRIKES

The union has been working on a day-to-day basis since the old contract expired Sept. 23, although some wildcat strikes have broken out since that date.

The package contains wage increases ranging from $3.50 to $8 a week for workers now receiving $74.50 to $150.50 at Detroit and less outside.

The wage increases are the same as those agreed on Oct. 4. Among the features in today's agreement that were not included in the original pact were non-economic items like revised grievance procedures, provisions for work under extreme weather conditions and the length of management replacement assignments.

As in the Oct. 4 contract, 45 communities will be upgraded into higher wage areas.

MUST BE RATIFIED

No date has been set by the union for a ratification vote.

Walter Schaar, regional vice president for the CWA, had said earlier the union would not bargain past midnight Tuesday.

This deadline had led some rank and file members to believe there would be a strike if no agreement were reached.

The union's state director, Herman Shelton, said in Lansing Tuesday, "There has been no authorization for a strike."

Earlier Tuesday about two dozen phone company workers staged a wildcat strike and picketed a company garage in Detroit.

Angelo's Held Up By Trio

78th Armed
Robbery Here
This Year

Three masked bandits, each armed with a revolver, last night held up Angelo's Party store at 885 Territorial road in Benton Harbor and escaped with $894 in bills.

Benton Harbor Police Chief Merle C. McCarroll said last night's holdup marked the 78th armed robbery reported investigated so far this year by his department. The armed robbery rate is "way, way up" from last year in the city.

Police, called to the store at 9 p.m., were told that two employees were the sole persons inside the establishment when the three Negro men entered, brandishing guns.

EMPLOYEES' ACCOUNT

The employees were Joseph Genovese, 55, of 612 North Crystal avenue, Benton township, who called police; and Jack Carter, 63, of 1151 Broadway, Benton Harbor. Genovese told Patrolman Marvin Fiedler he was just coming from a cooler at the rear of the store when the three men entered. Carter was reported inside a supply room at the time.

"Hit it," one of the bandits shouted to Genovese, ordering him to open the cash drawer. "Hurry," shouted another, and by this time, Genovese said he was putting the bills into a paper sack held by the first bandit.

Carter told police he heard the commotion, looked out of the supply room door and was spotted by one of the bandits, who then shouted three or four times: "Come on out."

TRIO FLEES

With the loot in the sack, the trio ordered Genovese and Carter to the rear of the store and then fled. Police reported they fled in an auto.

Tony Angelo, Jr., who is sole owner of the party store at Territorial and Fair avenue, was called to the establishment and determined the amount of missing money. No change was taken, police were told.

Police were told that the bandits each wore a green silk-like scarf over the lower portion of his face.

APPARENT LEADER

The man, apparently in charge of the robbery who shouted, "Hit it," was described as short, about five feet, five inches tall and heavy set for his height, weighing about 150 pounds. He was wearing a cloth three-quarter length raincoat.

The second was reported tall and slender, about five feet, ten inches and weighing about 150 pounds. He was wearing a black leather jacket. The third was also listed as about five feet ten inches tall and weighing about 150 pounds.

The party store last year was hit by burglars who cut through the roof and used cutting torches to open a safe. More than $1,000 was reported taken then, and sparks from the torch ignited nearby paper, bringing firemen to the scene.

Chief McCarroll said the 78 armed robbery reports so far this year include ten in January, six in February, four in March, one in April, six in May, two in June, 15 in July, nine in August, five in September, 14 in October and so far this month.

From Age-Old Roots

Thanksgiving Day is the American variant, it would be incorrect to say equivalent, of the harvest festivals of Europe. This holiday which Americans know as a family feast with a strong element of worship may seem widely separated from the folk celebrations that, in older lands, hark back to pagan ways.

There is no question that the roots of Thanksgiving Day are to be found in such festivities. Even the austere Pilgrim Fathers, giving thanks that autumn day in 1621, were gay because the harvest had been good. Gov. Bradford sent "four men on fowling, so we might after a more special manner rejoice together, after we had gathered the fruit of our labors." More than 80 Indians, bringing venison and wild turkeys, joined the colonists in the general feasting.

That first American Thanksgiving Day came after a good summer had followed a bitter winter that killed nearly half of the little company of settlers. There was a poor harvest the next year, and so there was no celebration, but there was one in 1623 and others followed.

The custom of giving thanks to God for blessings received became a part of the New England background and in time a part of the American cosmos. The fruits of the earth are life itself, as our pagan forefathers knew and as we still know in these times when fewer are engaged in tilling the soil. They are part of the cycle of the seasons, the cycle of human existence, to be accepted as God-given.

It is good to pause on Thanksgiving Day and return our gratitude to the Creator.

A Different Test For One Man-One Vote Rule

The U.S. Supreme Court agreed Monday to hustle the law out of its time honored, dignified pace in an effort to settle the Georgia deadlock of who should take over the reins as governor of the Peach state.

South Carolinians, we might interject here, strongly resent that designation for their neighbor. They point out, in all accuracy, that the Palmetto state raises more peaches than Georgia could hope to put on the market. Public relations, however, had its cliches just as does politics and since there is no organized movement by the Carolinians to forsake their equally dubious honor of being palm fringed more than they say California or Florida, the rest of us might as well abide by the official, though statistically unjustified, designation.

Now, to get back to the bone of contention tossed up by the November 8th elections.

Georgians went to the polls loaded with a full dose of white backlash and split their votes almost evenly between two unabashed segregationists.

Howard (Bo) Callaway, the Republican, came out a few skimpy ballots ahead of Lester Maddox, the Democrat.

Way back in the rear was Ellis Arnall, a former governor, running as a moderate, who picked up a few thousand votes as a write-in candidate.

He gained just enough to knock Callaway or Maddox away from an outright majority of the total vote cast.

Under a state statute passed in 1824 this outcome would be decided by a tally within the Georgia legislature which would have to choose, in this instance, from among the two highest candidates.

A special panel of three federal judges ruled late last week this procedure violates the one man-one vote principle laid down by the Supreme Court since it would be possible for the state legislature to install the No. 2 vote puller. The American Civil Liberties Union was an active intervenor in the suit.

We do not have a Georgia history book at hand to explain the reasoning behind this 142-year-old ordinance, but at that time in America's development, the centralized two-party system as we know it today was still in its formative stage. Splinter groups abounded in many sections and possibly the Georgia legislature saw difficulties in a plurality candidate occupying the state's highest office.

Having the legislature resolve this impasse between plurality and an outright majority even though the legislature could settle on the second highest runner carries a certain justification in that the legislature being chosen on a geographical basis does express to some extent the total body of opinion within the state.

Whether the Georgia legislature legitimately spotted a problem peculiar to its state or was just seeing things under the bed is not clear, but in any event this system does not prevail elsewhere. The nearest approach to it is the run-off provision in most Southern states, including Georgia, on primary elections.

The Supreme Court which probably never gave a thought to the Georgia ordinance when it handed down its one man-one vote opinions has indicated it will accept a fast appeal and will deliver a quick decision in the Callaway-Maddox-Arnall triangle.

If the Court upsets the statute, it would almost have to make some law where none now exists to fill a potential void in the state's governmental structure. Presumably this could take one of two slants: either decreeing a run-off election before the end of the year or sustaining the legislative method for this one time, plus a warning for the state to change its election process for future, complete compliance with the one man-one vote ruling.

Permitting the present governor to hold over for the new term would be a novel but drastic result since as a hold-over he would be kept in office without the state constitutional mandate for being elected to it.

Considering that the federal electoral college flies in the face of the one man-one vote principle and the Constitutional method of Congress resolving any deadlock in the college is equally at variance with that theory, the second alternative seems proper at this time.

Come One, Come All

Australians, like Canadians, suffer from fits of angry frustration when they see more and more of their natural resources passing into foreign ownership.

Some bitter voices were raised in the Australian Parliament the other day when an advertisement from a Canadian newspaper was waved aloft. This advertisement offered tracts of land in Australia, each of more than 1,000 acres, for sale to "investors, brokers and ranchers."

No wonder the Australians were angry, seeing slices of their country hawked overseas for profit. It was not Canada's fault; the ad was inserted by an American firm.

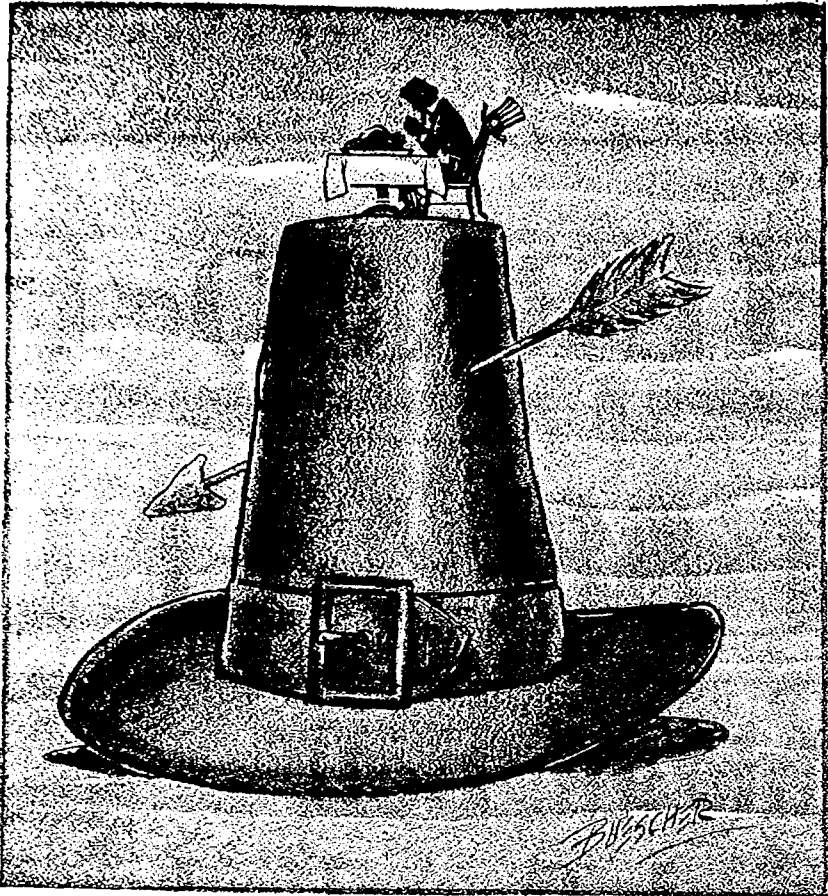

However wounding to Australian pride such transactions may be, they are legitimate. Furthermore, some Australians have supported purchases of vast tracts of land by Americans.

In the last five years, more than 35 million acres of Australian land have been bought by Americans, most of it for grazing beef cattle. Political uncertainties in some South American countries have persuaded American ranching companies that their capital is more secure in Australia.

The market for Australian beef seems inexhaustible. American companies have poured capital into these ranches at a rate that the Australians could never hope to match.

When entrepreneurs start peddling pieces of the homeland around the world there are indignant cries in the Australian House of Commons.

Letters To The Editor...

Editor, The Herald-Press:

KEEP 'EM ORBITING

The four-day mission space flight of the Gemini series, the last of its kind, "the last of the Mobians" and "the end" as the astronauts jokingly called it, was a grand finale to this glorious achievement. I've been leery of writing you this until it ended successfully. It was the first time I'd seen it on color TV and more exciting and beautiful than I imagined!

But what a contrast between it and the earlier flights of the Mercury series and even the Gemini. How we all held our breath as Space Center gave permission for Col. John Glenn (then a major) to go seventh orbit and then eight. We all heaved a sigh of relief when Col. Glenn was again on earth. How the lights of Perth Amboy, Australia, were a bright greeting and the suspense of Grisham landing in rough seas and nearly being inundated before rescued. How sad he was to lose the important data aboard his capsule.

How we heard the wonder and exclamations of beauty as each new astronaut went aloft. How we, here on earth, marveled at the great rate of speed they were traveling through unknown space, uncharted seas of billowy clouds, darkness and stars and bright sunshine! How when our President Kennedy immediately phoned Col. Glenn aboard his rescue ship over long distance ship-to-shore and said "We are proud of you."

So soon do we forget the little things of life, whether on land or high above it, under the ocean or on it. Each space flight gave us more knowledge.

What a contrast to now, when all went as planned and the astronauts landed as scheduled "on the nose" or "in the money" as the two intrepid astronauts expressed it.

In the earlier flights, the whole world appeared thrilled as the teams around the world aided and added their part.

Today, it was just as necessary to have all these teams doing their share but it seemed more like a mere exercise, another notch to the teams working so well together, engineers, scientists, doctors, mechanics, chemists, Army, Navy, and Marines, etc., and astronauts.

Not even the President or Vice President had time to phone their congratulations! Of course he may have and we didn't hear it. But at the time our President was very busy with affairs of our nation and his own personal matters, grave and serious as they might have been.

Wonder if Kennedy would have been so casual and neglectful? He, President Kennedy, was constantly being faced with grave and serious matters of both the state of our country and his own! But then, there is a vast difference between Boston and Texas and the personalities of the two Presidents.

I heard only one shout of excitement as someone aboard the Wasp called out that they spotted the parachute and capsule floating down to earth: "There she is!"

There has been talk of postponing the Apollo flights. How great their cost and how we pay far less for undersea exploration and learn less. The oceans or seven seas of our world have been with us a long, long time and only recently have they potentialities for man. Tonight astronaut Carpenter is speaking at the Museum of Natural History in New Orleans on "Oceanographic" problems and discoveries.

What a pity to allow all we have proven and achieved and learned by these great men, our astronauts, pioneers of space. It is their skills and training and our attention to details that none were lost and the program successful. Going to the moon is a mere incidental goal to find out what more is in outer space and how it can be used to man's advantage. Not to continue now would be a great waste of the past year's gain. Never before in the history of man "have so few achieved so much in so little time for so many," to quote Churchill.

We dare not stop now our highly trained, skilled test pilots who are only BEGINNING to probe the mysteries of space. Costly it is, yes, but if only in tribute to President Kennedy instead of another street or roadway being named in his memory.

Rather it be the USA up there in space, than only more Sputniks.

All glory be to the bravado men of the 12th Gemini flight as well as all preceding flights! Emily F. Chapman, Rte. 1, New Buffalo.

"HARVEY" PASSED BY

As Student Director and Promoter of "Harvey," our Senior Class play, we were very hurt at the meager coverage of our production. We, not to mention our cast and faithful committee members, put many long hours into presenting "Harvey," only to find him briefly mentioned in our local paper.

In our hearts we know "Harvey" was a great success, but we truly would have liked to share our Senior Class activities with the public.

speaking of YOUR HEALTH

By Lester L. Coleman, M. D.

Can sleep be disturbed by a heavy meal before bedtime?

All of us in the practice of medicine are asked if a late dinner or even a light snack before bedtime is "bad" for sleep or for the heart and digestion. There is no universal answer that can satisfy all people of all ages.

I have known patients who can fall into a sound sleep after a massive dinner. I have known others who thrash about after a taste of crackers and milk.

There are many factors that determine a person's ability to sleep besides diet. Emotional stress, special excitement, like an evening of card playing, so stimulate some people that sleep is interfered with.

Many learn by trial and error what their exact needs are for a sound and beneficial sleep and adjust their eating habits to their own needs.

It is astonishing how often people find the very foods that distress them and later learn to avoid them after one or more unpleasant experiences.

Can the paternity of a child be determined by blood testing?

The blood of all people falls into one of four groups, O, A, B, and AB. In addition there are highly specialized subdivisions known as group m and n, which are used in some legal cases to establish the fatherhood of a child.

Actually, these subgroups are compared with the blood of the child to show who cannot be the father rather than who is the father of the child.

There are so many possibilities that not all states will admit as legal evidence blood groupings as the final decision in the paternity of the child.

What is meant by a referred pain?

The network of nerves that spread all over the body are connected with each other and depend on each other in all of the ways that the body functions.

Sometimes a painful sensation in one part of the body can send or refer pain to a far distant organ. It is for this reason that physicians are on guard to recognize symptoms that resemble each other but are caused by different reasons.

A good illustration is the fact that gall bladder disease may first show up with pain in the back between the shoulder blades. A heart attack or angina pectoris may first be recognized by shooting pains to the shoulder and down the left arm.

Headaches may be caused by eyestrain or the need for new glasses. An acute attack of appendicitis may be responsible for a chest pain that resembles pleurisy.

These are but a few of the many types of referred pain that are uncovered by the "detecting" techniques of doctors commonly known as diagnosis.

What causes some women to have marked growth of hair on their face?

Excess hair on the face is called hirsutism and is almost always due to some imbalance of the female hormones. Some of these cases can be corrected after elaborate studies of the balance between the estrogen and androgen hormones of the body.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH — Boric acid can be dangerous to infants. Don't use it.

CONTRACT BRIDGE...

By B. Jay Becker

this dreadful habit, you must train yourself to think first and play later, instead of playing first and thinking later.

Here is an example of the inadvertent type of error in everyday play. Let's say you're declarer at five clubs and West leads the king of hearts. When you play the ace, East ruffs it and returns a trump, and since you must later lose a spade and another heart, you go down one.

You might say you were a victim of unusually bad luck, but, if you really stop to think about the matter, you realize that you went down on a hand where you started with eleven tricks and wound up with ten.

What went wrong was that you failed to preserve those eleven tricks because you played too hastily from dummy on the first trick. What you should have done was to duck the king of hearts, as well as the queen and jack if the suit was continued, ruffing the third round in your hand.

Had you done this, you would have made the contract, because you would eventually have discarded your spade loser on the ace of hearts.

Actually, you should know from the bidding that East might ruff the ace of hearts, but if you played the ace and thought about the proper play later, you were in effect guilty of putting the cart before the horse.

Opening lead—king of hearts. How often do you make a bid and, a few seconds after you make it, wish you hadn't, because some new thought has occurred to you and you'd like to change the bid?

Or how often do you make a play and want to retract it moments later, because you overlooked something you should have done instead?

The trouble with doing these things, if you ever do them, is that you're not allowed to change your bid or play, but have to stand or fall by whatever it is that you've already done.

BORN TODAY

Franklin Pierce, 14th president of the U.S. and son of Revolutionary War soldier and governor of New Hampshire Benjamin Pierce, was born at Hillsboro, N.H., in 1804. A graduate of Bowdoin college (Maine), Pierce was admitted to the bar in 1827 and served in the state legislature from 1820 to 1833, the U.S. House of Representatives, 1833-37, and the U.S. Senate, 1837-42. In 1842, Pierce resigned from the Senate and took up a successful law practice in Concord, N.H.

During the Mexican War Pierce was a brigadier general. Thereafter he continued to oppose anti-slavery tendencies within the Democratic party. As a result, through his career had been undistinguished, he was the Southern choice as a compromise candidate, breaking the deadlock and winning the Democratic nomination to the presidency on the 49th ballot.

As president, Pierce followed a course of appeasing the South at home and of playing with schemes of territorial expansion abroad. He attempted conciliation on the slavery issue, but his signing of the Kansas-Nebraska Act further alienated many Northerners. During his administration Japan was opened to the outside world, the Gadsden Purchase of land from Mexico was negotiated, and the Ostend Manifesto signed.

A kindly, courteous person, Pierce was weak, unstable, and lacking in presidential qualities. His administration was marked by the national unrest over slavery that would later lead to the Civil War.

Others born this day include author Sir Gilbert Parker, publisher Helen Rogers Reid, actor Boris Karloff and comedian Harpo Marx.

Berrien Friend Of Court Retiring

Niles Man Is Suggested To Replace Mrs. Granzow

Mrs. Raymond (Elizabeth) Granzow, first official friend of the court, said Tuesday she will retire from her post Dec. 23.

MRS. ELIZABETH GRANZOW

Eulogies Given By K Of C

For Deceased Council Members

Benton Harbor Knights of Columbus Council 1120 paid tribute to deceased members Tuesday in memorial services at the Calappa avenue clubrooms.

Eulogies were given for seven who died during the past year — Grover Price, Edgar Weed, Robert Guy, Eugene Murphy, Edward J. O'Brien, Roy Cameron and Joseph Sedon. The eulogies were delivered by Nelson Oehlhaufen, John Connell, Oliver Furlan, Edward Broderick, James Humburg, Tony Angelo and Robert Wieser.

The principal address was given by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Joseph R. Byrne, council chaplain. Music was by the men's choir under direction of James Staudt.

The ceremony was in charge of a committee of Msgr. Byrne, Lawrence Coder, Robert Tibbitts, John Horndash, Ted Vernasco, Norbert Cramer, George Daday and Grand Knight Marvin Brower.

Mrs. Granzow was appointed to the office in 1948 by the late former Governor Kim Sigler, after being recommended by the late Berrien Circuit Judge Edward Westin.

She assumed duties formerly handled by Probation Officer Guy Tyler, and a caseload of 389 family problems. What was then a one-woman operation has since grown to an office with a staff of six and caseload average of 2,400.

A native of Wisconsin, she graduated from Benton Harbor high school and later attended University of Arizona, where she was the school's first homecoming queen. She graduated in 1922, with a sociology degree, and took graduate work in social services administration at University of Chicago.

She was a caseworker for United Charities in Chicago for several years and later served as industrial secretary — counseling women factory workers — for YWCAs in St. Joseph and Hammond, Ind. She was home service director for the Berrien county chapter of American Red Cross immediately before her appointment as friend of the court.

LIVE IN ST. JOE

Mrs. Granzow and her husband, Raymond, who is an examiner for the Michigan department of revenue, live at 501 Ridgeway, St. Joseph. They have a son, Tom Granzow, manager of Emory Air Freight's eastern division at John F. Kennedy airport in New York, a daughter, Mrs. Arthur Jordan of Birmingham, Mich., and five grandchildren.

John D. Schoenhals to Niles, retired Michigan state policeman, has been recommended by Berrien Circuit Judge Karl F. Zick and Philip A. Hadsell to replace Mrs. Granzow. His appointment is currently awaiting approval by Gov. George Romney.

Next month 24 men are scheduled to be drafted and the month after that 36. However, in January 342 men will be given physicals. (Staff photo)

Biggest Challenge In Job Training?

Placing ADC Recipients, Says Program Chief

Finding employment for women on ADC rolls is the biggest challenge facing on-the-job training of the Tri-County Community Action Program.

Festus Valentine, job training director, said a wage of at least $1.50 an hour is required to take a mother off ADC rolls and convert her into an employee. It is impossible to make ends meet on some rates as low as $1.10 to $1.25 and the woman is better off by remaining a welfare recipient.

Valentine last night outlined objectives of the program to a group of 35 persons at the Vincent hotel, Benton Harbor. They represented about 40 per cent of the largest employers in the Twin Cities area.

TRI-CAP has received a grant to conduct a job training program for 200 persons in Berrien, Cass and Van Buren counties. One hundred positions have been allocated to the Twin Cities. Seventeen persons are enrolled already and employers are showing interest in expanding the program.

Job trainees are paid the prevailing rate for training periods of four to 26 weeks. Employers are reimbursed a maximum of $25 a week during training by the federal grant.

Valentine urged employers to accept less than the maximum when possible to permit more persons to receive training. Businesses willing to participate will be contacted soon on details of establishing job training.

Goal of this part of the war on poverty is to turn relief recipients into productive workers and give unskilled persons an opportunity for better-paying jobs, Valentine said.

BH Seeks New City Actuary

Four Firms Are Being Considered

A new actuary for Benton Harbor's municipal pension plans will be selected from among four firms.

The city's two pension boards met last night and decided to contact four firms regarding their qualifications and interest in handling the police-fire and general pension plans. Mayor Wilbert Smith said one of them is expected to be named as a replacement for McCready Pension Engineers of Indianapolis which was fired as the city actuary.

Warnings that the pension plans are not sufficiently funded have been voiced for several years.

Cost May Be Cut To $6,980,000

Expansion Of Present Building Also Favored

Benton Harbor school district planners last night showed general agreement on plans for a second high school, which would include 327,771 square feet and cost about $6,980,000, excluding the purchase and development of land.

Also generally favored was a 99,723 square foot addition to the existing high school, with a total cost for the addition and renovation of the present building set at $2,490,000.

Original architects' plans called for a new 346,000 square-foot high school to cost $7,470,000 and a 119,000 square foot addition and renovation project at the present high school to cost $2,843,000.

While a total construction reduction of $843,000 would be realized, planners noted that original plans for a new high school included $200,000 for site purchase and development.

FINAL ACTION DELAYED

Meeting as a "priority" subgroup of the central committee, the planners postponed a formal vote as to whether to accept the revisions and pass them on to the central committee for further discussion and voting action.

The planners met last night in Benton Harbor junior high and toured the newer portions. They postponed at least until next week any decision on what to do with the structure. It is generally planned for future use as a middle school, housing sixth through eighth grades. Plans also call for demolition of the old 1892 portion of the building.

And, yet to be completed are discussions on final space and cost estimates of elementary school construction, tentatively set at $3,844,700.

The planners will meet at 7 p.m. next Tuesday, at Benton Harbor high school.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS
Discussion at the high school level last night centered about the industrial arts sections of both high school construction projects. If approved, the total construction and renovation cost on the high school level would be about $9,470,000, and it was noted that about $2 million would be devoted to industrial arts areas—including graphic arts or printing, woodworking, drafting, building trades, metal and machine shops, power auto mechanics and electricity-electronics.

These areas, as now planned, would utilize 36,064 square feet in the new high school and 28,128 square feet in the present high school.

It was generally agreed that plans are flexible to enable these areas to serve for vocational and industrial arts, or general training. It also was agreed that results of a county plan for vocational training centers could well determine if these areas in the high schools could be reduced. A county plan calling for two centers is expected to be placed on the ballot next June, planners commented.

The fate of the present Benton Harbor junior high school appeared far from resolved last night. Questions raised included: Does the district want a walk-in school in the core of the city? If so, would it become an all-Negro school in time? Would integration and best learning facilities be realized by building all middle schools at the edges of the city area?

None of the questions was resolved, and when asked what a completely integrated school is, Mrs. Mary DeFoe, secretary of the Benton Harbor NAACP branch, indicated she could give a complete answer after an executive meeting of the organization, planned in the near future.

'THE GOLDEN LAND' Camera Club Offering Movie Tour Of Egypt

With Clifford Kamen as their guide, Twin City Camera club members will journey pictorially into "Egypt—the Golden Land," for the third lecture in this year's Travel and Adventure series Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, Nov. 28, 29 and 30. The time each night is 8 o'clock. Kamen's photographic skill, his speaking ability and vast experiences are said to have made him outstanding in the field of travel film lecturers. Among the audiences which he addresses regularly are such as the National Geographic society, New York Town Hall, the Geographical Societies of Philadelphia and Chicago and major university courses, plus outstanding theatrical producers and private groups. He is one of the few independent producers accredited to provide educational films for classroom use. Kamen will show the Egypt of today as a blend of the remnants and ruins of an ancient civilization, exotic bazaars, Coptic Christian monasteries of the Fifth Century, and modern engineering marvels like the Suez canal, ambitious irrigation projects and the Arab world's most cosmopolitan cities.

TEMPLE OF ABU SIMEL, one of the great temples of ancient Egypt to be shown in Clifford Kamen's all-color travelogue, "Egypt—The Golden Land," at St. Joseph high school next week, Nov. 28, 29, and 30. The film is a Twin City Camera Club Travel and Adventure presentation.

SJ Library Gets 'Adventures'

The Maude Preston Palenske Memorial library in St. Joseph has received a copy of "Adventures in the People's Business," the story of World Book encyclopedia by William Murray. The volume was presented by Mrs. Paula Norberg, a Twin Cities representative of World Book.

K-Ration Box Also Stationery

U. S. Army Specialist Joseph W. Klupp of Benton Harbor didn't have any stationery to write a letter to his parents because he had been out in the jungles of Viet Nam for more than a month.

So he used a top of a cardboard box from his K-rations for a postcard to send a note to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klupp, 1659 Norwood avenue, Benton Harbor.

The note was sent just to let his parents know he was alright even though his unit has "been meeting up with too many Charles (Viet Cong) and finding his supplies."

Lakeshore Student Arrested

Second To Admit Driving On Lawn

Berrien sheriff's deputies said a second arrest has been made in connection with the destruction of grass and bushes at Lakeshore high school.

A 16-year-old Stevensville youth, a student at Lakeshore, has been petitioned into juvenile court Tuesday, after admitting he drove his pickup on the lawn Sunday night. Deputy Jon Nichols said.

School officials indicated the youth will make restitution for damage or face expulsion. The school has been plagued by vandalism in the form of drag races or joy rides on lawns and over bushes, and officials said they will sign complaints against anyone found damaging school property, Nichols said.

YOUTH FINED

Another Lakeshore student, Al Hurlbut, 18, route 1, Baroda, was fined $15 and ordered to pay $6.70 costs after admitting Monday he drove his car across the lawn. Hurlbut was warned by St. Joseph Municipal Judge Maurice Weber that any repeat performances would bring $100 fines.

Both youths have agreed to make restitution for damages, Nichols said.

In other vandalism reports, Gary Pope, Watson road, Sodus, told deputies someone shot a hole in a window of his pickup last night.

A SCOOP FOR CULTURE: Official ground breaking ceremonies were held Tuesday for Benton Harbor's new public library that will rise in what was the center of Wall street. Wielding the shovel (left to right) are Ray Mittan, library board president; Mayor Wilbert Smith; Mrs. Eleanor Whitney, head librarian, and John Kinney, Jr., chairman of library building authority. The mayor said construction is evidence of new vitality in the city. Background shows Brunson hill partially cleared by urban renewal and high rise apartments under construction for elderly. Total cost of library project is $621,000. Completion is scheduled for early fall of 1967. (Staff photo)

Grimes Will

WheelerPublic Works Post
In South Haven

CYRUS GRIMES

SOUTH HAVEN — Cyrus Grimes, former superintendent of South Haven's electric generating plant until it was closed last April, was named distribution superintendent for the board of public works today by City Manager Leonard Harris.

The 50-year-old Grimes succeeds Calvin Wheeler, who was fatally wounded in a deer hunting accident Saturday. The appointment was effective today, Harris said.

Grimes has been an employee of the city since he was hired as maintenance man and mechanic in 1946. He became chief power plant mechanic in June, 1954, and was named assistant power plant superintendent in December, 1958.

PLANT CLOSED

Within six months, Grimes was promoted to plant superintendent, a job he held until early this year when the plant was closed.

He lives with his wife, Adeline, and three of their four children at their home on Monroe boulevard, South Haven township.

Propose
Having 2
SpeakersGOP May Balk,
Hoping To Win
Showdown Vote

By JIM NICHOLS
LANSING (AP) — Democratic House members indicated Tuesday they were willing to share with Republicans the leadership of the evenly divided house. Co-leadership, which could include two speakers and two co-chairmen for each House committee, will be suggested by Democrats when they meet with Republican leaders to discuss organization of the House, which apparently will be deadlocked 55-55 next term.

Democrats had a comfortable edge in the session just ending and elected Joseph Kowalski, D-Detroit, as speaker (presiding officer).

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS

Kowalski presided over the first post-election caucus of House Democrats Tuesday as the group arrived at its co-leadership proposal.

The Republican House members, who caucused last week, contend they should organize the House alone because they claim the voters clearly indicated Nov. 8 they want the GOP in power.

Kowalski would be the most likely Democratic speaker candidate, and the Republicans are expected to nominate their current leader, Rep. Robert Waldron of Grosse Pointe. But both men face some opposition from within their ranks.

PARTY FEUD

Kowalski's most outspoken foe is fellow Detroit Democrat E. D. O'Brien. Kowalski stripped O'Brien of a committee chairmanship during the 1965 session and the two almost came to blows on the floor of the House.

O'Brien vowed following Tuesday's caucus that he would not vote for Kowalski for any leadership post next January. If no co-leadership agreement can be reached, O'Brien's refusal to support Kowalski could let the GOP organize the House with a 55-54 majority.

The most serious previous opposition to Waldron from within Republican ranks came from Rep. Roy Spencer of Attica.

GOP LINEUP

Last week at the GOP caucus, Spencer announced that he was withdrawing as a candidate for speaker and that he would vote for Waldron on the first ballot. But Spencer also let it be known he still wanted the job—at least if Waldron isn't picked on the first tally.

Both parties plan to caucus again Dec. 7, when the Legislature returns to officially go out of business for the year.

At Tuesday's caucus, O'Brien introduced last August to oust Kowalski from the speaker's chair. The resolution, which had no co-sponsors, died in the Committee on House Policy.

O'BRIEN'S POSITION

"I have no intention of voting for a Republican for speaker," O'Brien said following the meeting. "I would like to see the Democratic caucus develop new leadership over the next two years."

"There are a number of very qualified men in that caucus," he added, "men who would be better leaders than Joe Kowalski."

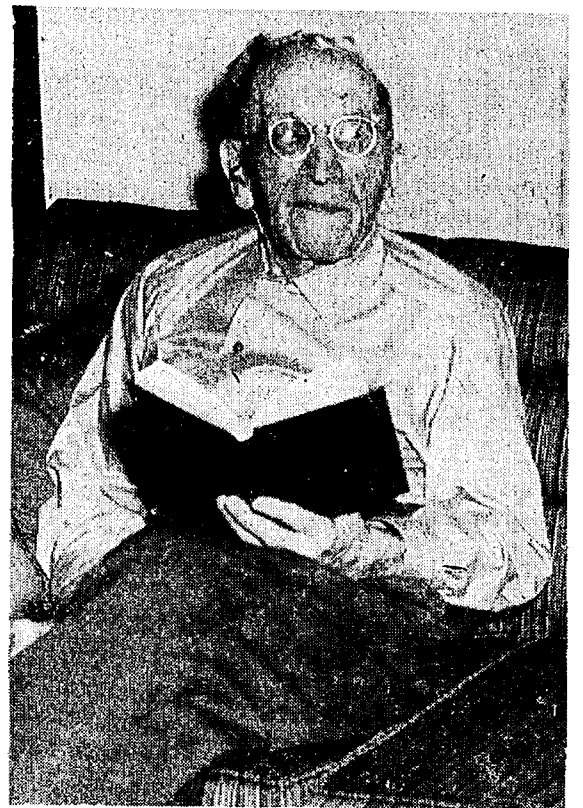

The Democrats also adopted a resolution promising to chart "a positive and constructive course of action in 1967-68" and saying they "pledge our cooperation with the Republican governor and the Republican Senate."

Hired, Not Fired In South Haven

SOUTH HAVEN — For those readers who did a double take at the headlines over the South Haven hospital board story yesterday, board members hired, but did not fire accountants during action Monday night.

The firm of Arthur Anderson Company was retained by the board to make a study of hospital accounting and to advise about more efficient methods of handling the complex administrative handling of Medicare and Medicare patients.

A typographical error in the headline implied that hospital accountants were fired.

READS OWN BOOK: Allie E. Chauncey, a 99-year-old resident of Bridgman looks through one of the two books he wrote while in his nineties. The one he is holding is a history of the Northwest Territories. The other book is a history of Berrien county. (Staff photo)

STILL SPRY, ALERT

Historian Chauncey
To Be 99 Tomorrow

By BILL RUMBLER
South Berrien Bureau

BRIDGMAN — Allie E. Chauncey of 561 Vine street has been a leading businessman, civic booster and prominent citizen of Bridgman for 99 years. Well, not quite that long since his 99th birthday will be Thanksgiving Day.

Even at that age his memory is crystal clear, clear enough to remember all the details of his 56-year business career in Bridgman. He recalled that it all started in 1902 when he borrowed $200 from Ozro Baldwin and set up a general store.

With the profits from this store Chauncey and Ozro's son, O.A.D. "Bun" Baldwin, undertook a program to make Bridgman a better place to live. They bought tracts of real estate and gave chunks of it away to businesses so they would settle in town. The remainder of the land was sold as home sites and helped start the community growing.

RECALLS STORE

The old Chauncey and Baldwin store was once pronounced by the Dry Goods Reporter of Chicago in a survey of general stores in the Great Lakes region, as having one of the largest and most complete inventories and as having one of the biggest annual businesses in the area.

In 1927 Chauncey said he sold out to Baldwin and later went into the coal business, where he stayed until his retirement. During this time he was named one of the first presidents of the Gast Manufacturing Co. and served in that capacity for 25 years. After that he joined the company's board of directors and remained with it into his 90's.

Also, while in his 90's he wrote two books, one a history of Berrien county and the other a history of the Northwest Territory. Other achievements in his career include being a member of the first Bridgman village council and a director of the first bank in town, which failed during the depression.

Chauncey's only living relative is a sister, Lula Scott, aged 92, of Coloma. Chauncey was born on a farm north of Stevensville.
